

KEHILLAH KEDOSHA (SACRED COMMUNITY)

Rap Written and Performed by Ben Pagliaro

What does it really mean... to be community? It's You and Me truthfully being everything that we can be

Standing up.... for injustices we can see, inequality, and (policy that we cannot hope to believe) poverty that we can set each other free

We each have a response....ability, we can learn information, but it means nothing if we don't dream and struggle with our answers these returning themes each year we return and say Atem N'tzavim

Y'all are standing that's what these words mean, it's a divine call to set the scene on a moment when our people took it upon themselves to finally break from their routines and convene

In the same place no matter the time or space, we are right here standing face to face with another chance to embrace each other it's our community, it's holy, and it can not be replaced

It's not a race where one of us reaches the end without making mistakes and finding new friends, what makes you Sacred is a beautiful blend of trust and love which are the gifts that you send
